Note on the cover image

The cover image is Mpatapo, an Adinkra symbol from Ghana. It represents a particular knot, and has been defined as “reconciliation” and “peacemaking after strife.” The image itself is borrowed with appreciation from Cornell University Library, <http://www.library.cornell.edu/africana>

Introduction

This report presents empirical data on degree-granting academic programs in California's institutions of higher education. The data was gathered from institutional Web sites during academic year 2005–2006.

Our first report was on the state of New York. There are interesting comparisons between California and New York.

	California	New York
Institutions with Africana Studies degree-granting units	60	58
Africana Studies faculty	604	421
Africana Studies courses	1886	1657
Percent of units with names reflecting the African Diaspora	55%	83%
Percent of units which are academic departments	50%	29%
Percent of units which are at public institutions	75%	50%

Table 1. Summary statistics on Africana Studies in two states.

On a quantitative basis, California surpasses New York in terms of Black Studies but the main difference is in name orientation and administrative structure. Much of this difference can be explained by the greater role of public institutions in California (75% versus 50%). The struggle for Black Studies has made greater progress toward departmental permanence in the public sector, while private elite institutions specialize in centers, institutes, and programs.

This report contains a set of tables that sums up aspects of institutional characteristics, curriculum, and faculty. After this are the following: complete lists of Africana Studies units in California, courses, and faculty, as we found them online, as well as a newspaper chronology, bibliography, and webliography.

We will begin with historical background and social context. The Black Studies movement grew out of two historical forces: the post-war demographic explosion and the radicalization of Black political culture. Black Studies began as a project in higher education of the Black Power movement. It has been an anti-racist movement intended to transform schools and community consciousness. It has been also a maturing academic profession and is now becoming an online knowledge network.

The Black experience in California

The history of California is a dynamic process of multiculturalism, waves of different ethnic groups clashing over land and cultural domination. People of African descent have been at the heart of the process from the very beginning, as early settlers, as a public policy issue in terms of fugitive slaves, and finally as the beneficiaries of the ratification of the Thirteenth Amendment in 1866. Another important historical anecdote is the following:

Born in Ohio, Frederick Roberts was a great-grandson of Sally Hemings. He grew up in Los Angeles and became a prominent publisher and mortician. Roberts was elected to the State Assembly as a Republican from the mostly white 74th Assembly District in 1919, making him California's first African American legislator. He served in the Assembly until his defeat in 1934 by another African American politician, Democrat Augustus F. Hawkins.

Table 2. African Americans and Latinos in California.

The Black population in California follows a clear pattern: under 2% of the total population until after World War II and expanding from 1950 (4.4%) to 2000 (7.4%).

There are three key cities, in terms of Black population, in the state: Los Angeles, Oakland, and San Francisco. The table below shows that by 1940 other US cities were larger centers of African American population (New York, Chicago, and Atlanta) although after World War II, Los Angeles surpassed Atlanta as a leading Black metropolis.

	1900	1920	1940	1960	1980	2000
New York	60,666	152,467	458,444	1,087,931	1,784,337	2,129,762
Chicago	30,150	109,458	277,731	812,637	1,197,000	1,065,009

Table 3. African American population of selected cities.

The great historical event that changed Black political culture and led to Black activist impulses in all areas of life was the great Watts insurrection, August 1965. More than 30 people were killed, 1,000 wounded, and 4,000 arrested. The Watts neighborhood was more than 90% Black but the police assigned to this area included only five Black officers out of 205. Watts was in 1965, the year Malcolm X was killed (February 1965) and was followed the next year by the explosion of Black power as a national political slogan (June 1966). Watts was a national political moment, but was especially important in California.

Out of this milieu of rebellion emerged the two leading tendencies in the North that shaped the dynamics of the Black liberation movement, the cultural nationalism of the US organization and its leader Maulana Karenga (southern California), versus the revolutionary nationalism of the Black Panther Party and its leader Huey Newton (northern California). SNCC is an example of a civil rights organization that reflected both tendencies, especially in the ad hoc complexity of its most visible leader Stokely Carmichael/Kwame Touré. He embraced an Afrocentric identity and cultural orientation as well as combative fight-back politics. Carmichael organized under the Panther symbol in Lowndes County, Alabama. Angela Davis was also important as a symbol of resistance.

This rise in radical Black politics was not separate from the 1960s–1970s resurgence of new left-wing forces known as the New Communist Movement (NCM). At least five key organizations of the NCM emerged in California: the October League, Revolutionary Union, Communist League, Venceremos, and the New Voice. Media, including The Black Panther newspaper, Ramparts magazine, The Movement newspaper, and Newsreel films, developed as a critical force uniting the movement. Serving as an ideological foundation was China Books and Periodicals (San Francisco) linking our movement to the literature of world revolution, especially the Chinese Communist Party and Chairman Mao, as well as all leading African revolutionaries.

The Black Press has been important over the entire 20th century. Charlotta Bass (1879–1969) was an important leader as editor and publisher of the California Eagle newspaper based in Los Angeles. Carlton Goodlett (1914–1997), a physician with a PhD in psychology, was a leading Black newspaper publisher in Northern California.

Black politicians have made gains at the local and national levels. Important Black politicians include the following: Karen Bass, Yvonne Brathwaite, Thomas Bradley, Janice Brown, Willie Brown, Wilmer Carter, Doris Davis, Mike Davis, Ron Dellums, Julian Dixon, Roosevelt Dorn, Mervyn Dymally, Bill Greene, Frank Holoman, Terry Johnson, Barbara Lee, Juanita Millender-McDonald, John Miller, Eric Perrodin, Curren Price, Leon Ralph, Laura Richardson, Mark Ridley-Thomas, Wilson Riles, Sandre Swanson, Daryl Sweeney, Edward Vincent, Maxine Waters, and Diane Watson.

On the cultural front, California has been the embodiment of mainstream stereotyping and demeaning of the Black artist, epitomized by Hollywood. It has also been the site for unprecedented artistic expression after Watts and the rise of Black Power. Budd Schulberg and others helped nurture a literature of identity and protest out of the Watts Writers Workshop. In fact, a full-fledged cultural festival followed the insurrection. Key to this was vanguard musical expression around key figures such as Horace Tapscott. In the visual arts, a key figure has been Samella Lewis, the first Black tenured professor in the 1960s and an author, publisher, and curator of record for African American artists. In northern California an important literary history linked the Afro-Beat poet Robert Kaufman to the great editor Joe Goncalves of the Journal of Black Poetry.

There were important journals of this Black Power movement. The most important for Black Studies has been The Black Scholar: Journal of Black Studies and Research. More than any other publication its pages have been a semi-official record of Black Studies cutting-edge debate. Under the leadership of Robert Chrisman and Robert Allen it is the only publication to survive from the early days of the Black Studies movement. The UCLA publication UFAHAMU covered Africa; especially important were the special issues on Amilcar Cabral, Frantz Fanon, and Walter Rodney. The Journal of Black Poetry and the Black Politician covered those fronts. The most serious journal of Black radical theorizing was Soul Book edited by Mamadou Lumumba. The Journal of Black Studies, founded by Molefi Asante while at UCLA, remains the state of the art academic journal in the field.

Other hubs were bookstores such as Marcus Books in San Francisco or Timbuktu in Riverside. The building of the California African American Museum in Los Angeles created the biggest Black cultural venue in the state.

During the history of Black Studies in California, there have been many individuals who made contributions and who invite scholarly investigation. Some of these people are Robert Allen, Walter Allen, Molefi Asante, James Banks, Lucius Barker, Fran Beale, Linda Burnham, Octavia Butler, Trevor Campbell, Clayborn Carson, Robert Chrisman, Eldridge Cleaver, Otis Cunningham, Douglas Daniels, Angela Davis, Emory Douglas, St. Clair Drake, Harry Edwards, Jimmy Garrett, Clyde Halisi, Nathan Hare, Cheryl Harris, Charles Henry, Donald Harris, Robert Hill, George Jackson, Maulana Karenga, Sydney Lemelle, William Little, Claudia Mitchell Kernan, Walter Mosley, Huey Newton, Wade Nobles, Theophile Obenga, Boniface Obichere, Earl Ofari, Arnold Rampersad, Cedric Robinson, Arthur Smith, Robert Staples, Oba T'Shaka, Ngugi wa Thiong'o, Dorothy Tsuruta, Richard Yarborough, Carlene Young, Shirley Weber, Margaret Wilkerson, and many, many others.

Black Studies in California

1. How many and which institutions grant degrees in California?

There are 60 institutions that grant degrees that address the African American experience. It is unusual that 20 of these are city (community) 2-year colleges. Overall 75% are public institutions. This is an important point as our New York study demonstrated that public institutions were the site of the greatest struggle and the greatest success in developing Black Studies.

University of California System (8 institutions)	City colleges, continued
UC Berkeley	Los Angeles Valley College
UC Davis	Mendocino College
UC Irvine	Merritt College
UC Los Angeles	Orange Coast College
UC Riverside	Riverside Community College
UC San Diego	Sacramento City College

Table 4. California institutions of higher education which grant academic degrees in Africana Studies.

2. What are the names of the academic units?

The names of programs reflect their ideological or theoretical orientation. Given the history of the field this is an important factor to consider in the analysis of the 60 institutions in California. Overall there is a greater tendency to have a name connecting the program to the African Diaspora (33). However, the most popular single name in California is Ethnic Studies (19) followed by Black Studies (10).

Table 5. Names of academic units.

3. Do all institutions have a Diasporic orientation?

Private institutions incorporate the concept of the African Diaspora into the name of their programs more often than public institutions (67% to 51%). There is also stratification within public institutions. One possible interpretation is that as you move into institutions with more resources, each ethnic group gets its own shop, while in the Cal State system and City Colleges there is greater political gain, but less resources so the ethnic groups get lumped together.

Private colleges and universities	15	67%
Public universities	45	51%
University of California System	8	63%
California State University System	17	53%
City colleges	20	45%
All colleges and universities	60	55%

Table 6. Academic units using a Diasporic name.

4. What level of administrative permanence exists?

The political point is made again when comparing the administrative structure of public and private institutions. Public institutions are more likely to have a departmental structure (55% to 33%). This is the same pattern as in New York.

	Public	Private	Total
Department	25	5	30
Program	17	8	25
Other	3	2	5
Total	45	15	60

Table 7. Administrative structure of academic unit, by public and private institution.

5. What kinds of degrees are granted?

The basic academic track in Black studies results in an undergraduate degree, BA and AA. However, there are also graduate-level degree possibilities and other kinds of certification.

	Public	Private	All institutions
Doctoral degree	2	1	3
Master's degree	1	0	1
Bachelor's degree (major)	21	10	31
Bachelor's degree (minor)	1	2	3
Associate's degree	9	0	9
Other	11	2	13
Total	45	15	60

Table 8. Highest degree offered.

6. Is graduate-level study possible?

There are four graduate programs that specifically focus on the African American experience. Two of these are more clearly located in a specific discipline (UCLA and UC Berkeley), while the other two locate the Black experience under the general ethnic rubric. All are rigorous and meet high academic standards.

Institution	Type	Degree	Thesis	Exam
UC Berkeley	Public	PhD in African Diaspora Studies	Yes	Yes
UC San Diego	Public	PhD in Ethnic Studies	Yes	Yes
UC Los Angeles	Public	MA in Afro-American Studies	Thesis or Exam required
University of Southern California	Private	PhD in American Studies and Ethnicity	Yes	Yes

Table 9. Graduate programs.

7. Does curriculum standardization exist?

Much of the content of any academic program is the content of the curriculum. These California data indicate that the greatest consensus exists with regard to courses that deal with gender issues, followed by introductory courses. Consistent with New York, there is little consensus in the area of courses about theory and Latinos. Slightly less than half focus on social change and research methods.

	Courses	Schools	As percent of all schools
Gender	163	40	67%
Social change	52	26	43%

Theory	23	15	25%
Senior seminar	23	16	27%
Latinos	77	16	27%

Table 10. Key areas within the curriculum.

8. What languages are studied?

About one-third of the institutions offer a focus on language. There is more of a tendency to study the general importance of languages within the African Diaspora than to take up the practical task of learning a traditional African language.

Africa	Courses	Schools	As percent of all schools
Traditional African	19	4	7%

Table 11. Courses teaching languages, linguistics, or literatures.

9. Are individuals studied?

Given the limitations of the curriculum, when a course focuses on a single individual, this is an important definition of a disciplinary icon. In California there are 22 courses devoted to 11 specific persons, either cultural or political figures. There is one woman, Toni Morrison. King and Malcolm X join her as the main foci, but uniquely they are joined by Fanon.

10. What ranks are held by the faculty?

The faculty is senior, with 64% at tenured ranks. As the first generation of faculty is now retiring this suggests we are entering a decade of aggressive hiring, especially at the leadership levels.

Professor	147	39%

Sources

This list of sources is in three parts. The first part is a chronological listing of newspaper coverage of Africana/Black Studies from 1968–2003. The second part is a selection of articles and books that represent Black intellectual history of New York and studies on the Black Studies Movement that began in the late 1960s. The third part is a webliography, a listing of relevant Web sites.
